DETAILED ACTION

Response to Arguments

1. Applicant's arguments with respect to claim 21 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 101

2. 35 U.S.C. 101 reads as follows:

Whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, may obtain a patent therefor, subject to the conditions and requirements of this title.

3. Claim 21 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 101 because the claimed invention is directed to non-statutory subject matter. Claim 1 cites "A distribution medium" without specifically defining the claimed "distribution medium" as tangible machine. The Specification however defines "distribution media" to include, for example, the Internet. The Internet part of the distribution media shows that the "distribution medium" can be a signal. And signals are intangible, which makes the claim non-statutory since this lacks practical application that produces a useful tangible, and concrete result (see ANNEX 1, page 30 and ANNEX IV, page 55 of the 35 U.S.C. 101 Guideline).

Allowable Subject Matter

4. Claims 19&20 are allowable over the prior art of record.

Art Unit: 2621

5. The following is a statement of reasons for the indication of allowable subject matter:

Regarding claim 19, the invention relates to an editing system and method and a distribution medium which are capable of quick editing.

The closest reference Degen et al (US 5,386,493) disclose a computer implemented apparatus for modifying the playback rate of a previously stored audio and voice data file stored within a computer system without altering the pitch of the audio data file as originally stored.

However, Degen et al fail to explicitly disclose an editing system, where the editing system further comprises wherein the changing means interpolates data of a pitch period between adjacent segments of the audio data.

Regarding claim 20, the invention relates to an editing system and method and a distribution medium which are capable of quick editing.

The closest reference Degen et al (US 5,386,493) disclose a computer implemented apparatus for modifying the playback rate of a previously stored audio and voice data file stored within a computer system without altering the pitch of the audio data file as originally stored.

However, Degen et al fail to explicitly disclose an editing method, where the editing method further comprises wherein the changing step interpolates data of a pitch period between adjacent segments of the audio data.
